Response to CBC Election Coverage in South Alabama

(INDIANAPOLIS) The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation (CBC.ca) published an article on November 6, 2016, featuring an interview with several collegiate members of Theta Epsilon—University of South Alabama regarding their support of Republican candidate for President of the United States, Donald Trump.

In the midst of a very polarizing and divisive presidential election, it is easy to get carried away in what feels like a harmless discussion in support of a candidate. We respect our members’ freedom of speech and ask that our members consider how that speech may be misinterpreted as speaking for an entire chapter and/or every member of an organization. We encourage our members to exercise their right vote and to educate themselves on the issues at play. However, we ask that our members understand when speaking on behalf of our organization or in conjunction with it, they should not engage in political endorsements.

In the article, one member is quoted in response to a question regarding Trump’s recent controversy regarding his statements involving egregious treatment of women.

“You go to a party any day, and there’s fraternity guys — any guys — grabbing girls, doing this and that. I don’t think it’s out of the normal realm of things. I don’t think it’s as big a deal,” she said. Alpha Gamma Delta is committed to the safety and wellbeing of each and every one of our members and shares concern with many that education must continue and is of utmost importance. We are committed to continue our education and awareness efforts to affirm that non-consensual sexual contact is unacceptable, in any setting, at any age. Our support team of volunteers and staff continues to work with our chapters and clubs to provide education and awareness that ensures the safety and dignity of each of our members.

Over the course of the past two years, Alpha Gamma Delta has taken part in various training and education opportunities related to sexual violence and consent education, supporting survivors and sexual assault awareness campaigns including the following recent programming:
